Hello,

Happy New Year! If you're receiving this email, it's because you are designated as a COE Standard Chair or Co-chair. Part of the preparation for our site visit this November is the preparation of a self-study. COE requires the self-study drafting process to be a collaboration among faculty and staff at the College, so I've made assignments and shared excerpts of the relevant portions of the self-study that pertain to your area of oversight/responsibility at the College. You should have received the following instructions when I shared a folder/google doc with you today, but in case you missed these, here they are again:

"I'm sharing a portion of the COE Self Study that I will need your—or your team's—help filling out as standard chairs. Please describe the institution's compliance with each criterion anywhere you see a "[Text]" box in the Google doc in this folder. As you complete this draft, feel free to use our previous self-study (Link) to copy any language that is still relevant. You will have to download this PDF to view as it is too large to view in your browser. Please note that the criteria have changed since our previous site visit in 2019, so you will need to pay attention to the substance of each criterion if adopting the previous self-study's language. I'd also advise leveraging AI tools when doing so makes sense. If you use these tools or our previous self-study language, please review the text to make sure it aligns with our actual/current practices at Southwest Tech as we will need to provide evaluators with proof of any claims we make. Please ensure all text boxes for the self-study excerpt have been completed by January 24th so we can have enough time to review your proposed language, suggest changes, and clarify things as needed. I'm happy to sit down and answer any questions that you might have during this process, so please don't hesitate to text, call, email, or stop by my office."

I know this is a tall ask at a busy time of year, and I appreciate your contributions to this process. I will be working closely with each of you throughout the year as we prepare for our visit. If you didn't receive a shared folder or Google Doc with your section of the self-study or if you feel lost when responding to specific criteria, please let me know, and we will sort it out together.

Best regards,

Neal
